Thomas Isidore Noel Sankara
12 21, 1949 - 10 15, 1987

Thomas Sankara was a revolutionary, Marxist, pan-Africanist and President of Burkina Faso from 1983-1987. Before he became president, he was a captain in the army. In 1983 Sankara seized power by a supported coup with the goal of eliminating corruption and the dominance of French colonial power. He renamed the country from Upper Volta to Burkina Faso ("Land of Upright Man"). Sankara wanted to change the country that he loved with left-winged reforms. Sankara instituted reforms such as a nation-wide literacy campaign, appointed females to high governmental positions, outlawed female genital mutilation, forced marriages, supported Women's rights, reduced the salaries of all public servants, redistributed land from the feudal landlords and gave it directly to the peasants, he forced civil servants to pay one month's salary to public projects, he also lowered his salary to $450 a month, and many other great things. With all these reforms came a bit of backlash from an array of groups which included the small but powerful Burkinabe middle class, the tribal leaders, and France. On October 15, 1987, Sankara was killed by an armed group with 12 other officials in a coup d'état organised by his former friend/colleague Blaise Compaore. Compaore immediately reversed Sankara's policies. Compaore ruled with dictatorship and remained in power for 27 years until he was overthrown by a popular protest in 2014.

Afrobeats

Afrobeat is a music genre which involves the combination of elements of West African musical styles such as fuji music and highlife with American funk and jazz influences, with a focus on chanted vocals, complex intersecting rhythms, and percussion. The term was coined by Nigerian multi-instrumentalist and bandleader Fela Kuti, who is responsible for pioneering and popularizing the style both within and outside Nigeria. He did this to distinguish soul music of American artists such as James Brown. Afrobeats began in Ghana in the early 1920's. Then Nigeria joined the wave in the late '60's led by Fela Kuti. The name "Afrobeat" shows the significance of groove to the music, as opposed to Afrofunk.

From early in the 21st century, a new type of sound, originating from Nigeria, has become an increasingly prominent in African popular music. Another distinction within Afrobeats is the notably west African, specifically Nigerian and Ghanaian, accented English. Since 2012, Afrobeats have gained mainstream recognition outside of Africa. Many first and second generation African immigrants follow and produce Afrobeats music. Afrobeats is a movement that will shed light in Africa in a positive way and bring us all together. A music festival that is recognized worldwide is One Africa Music Fest. The One Africa Music Fest showcases modern Afrobeat music and talent. Some of the most famous Afrobeat artists are Davido, Wizkid, Tiwa Savage, Mr Eazi, P-Square, Tekno, Maleek Berry, Burna Boy and many more.
